

JJ'S IT MANAGER WINS PRESTIGIOUS AWARD

Rifat Kiamil (r) and Mustafa Kiamil (l) of JJ Food Service Ltd.

BFFF is proud that one of its member companies has won a major IT award against corporate giants ITV, Carphone Warehouse and ATOC. Rif Kiamil, IT Manager of JJ Food Service won the BCS IT Professional Awards 2006 against stiff competition from the three other finalists mentioned above.

At first glance, with JJ being a relatively small operation in comparison to media giants ITV plc and market leaders The Carphone Warehouse and ATOC, one might have thought a big company would win the day so when the results were announced, no one was more surprised than 23 year old Rifat Kiamil, when he was asked to the stage at the Grosvenor House Hotel to collect the prestigious award.

The British Computer Society (BCS) is the leading professional body for information systems professionals. It has been recognising outstanding achievement in IT for over 30 years.

Even becoming a medallist for this award confirms prestige not just on the individuals involved, but also the organisations they represent. To win the Award is truly a great achievement.

BCS Chief Executive, David Clarke, said; The variety and quality of the projects entered into this year's awards showcase the tremendous contribution made by the IT profession to economic prosperity, to business efficiency and to our public services. They are all excellent examples of both the innovation and the high quality that the IT profession delivers on a daily basis".
