

YOUR BFFF

There is much confusion outside of BFFF as to how we operate. Many believe that a few senior figures in the foodservice world somehow determine what we do and how we do it. They couldn't be further from the truth. In recent years BFFF has become ever more project led and to represent the industry effectively we draw on skills and expertise from a very wide range of members and draw from specialist functional skills.

We not only are indebted to our members who are producers, importers, brokers, distributors, wholesalers and retailers, for providing their skilled representatives but we are also able to use their skills from their technical, legal, marketing, commercial, operational, PR, supply chain and finance functions along with the many owners, general managers, and managing directors who support us.

We agree the issues we wish to address, recruit the most appropriate talent and skills and meet and develop responses.

BFFF is strong because of the depth and breadth of its members and their representatives and for your information I list below the member companies who have provided representation into our committees and our project teams over the last 2 years.

We very much appreciate the support we receive from all our members be it providing representation, responding to fact finding enquiries, attending our events and keeping me and the team at Grantham aware of all the issues facing our industry.
